Wondering how and where you can get the health care you need?

Your baby has a better chance of being healthy if you start your prenatal care early. Even if you have never been eligible for medical assistance programs before, you may qualify for help through Baby Love.

The Baby Love Program can help you and your baby from the start by providing:

- ♥ childbirth education classes;
- ♥ counseling and emotional support when you're stressed;
- ♥ medical home visits for you and your baby;
- ♥ referrals to nutrition, health and family planning programs; and
- ♥ Maternity Care Coordination (MCCP) to help you apply for Medicaid and health insurance coverage for other children; get referrals to community resources and other agencies to help you with other life issues like housing or transportation; and more.

No matter where you receive your prenatal care, you can sign up for the Maternity Care Coordination Program. To find a program near you, call your local department of social services, health department, community health center, or one of these toll-free numbers:
